ENTERS CONGRESS RACE AS G. O. P. INDEPENDENT

William H. Hamilton of Fairfax County to Oppose Representative Carlin.

Politicians of the "Alexandria district" of Virginia are turning their attention to the claims of William H. Hamilton of Fairfax county, who today asserted he could cut the usual democratic majority in the district in half f he could break the old republican line-up and run on a "new republican" ticket. Mr. Hamilton has announced himself as a candidate for Congress, regardless of the fact that a republican convention has chosen Joseph L. Crupper as the regular republican candidate to oppose Representative Carlin, the democrat, who seeks to succeed him-

Mr. Hamilton explained his candidacy at this time in a statement issued by him today:

"Heretofore the republicans of my following a small and hide-bound or-ganization in which all places and all offices were parceled out among several leaders, who formed an inside ring eral leaders, who formed an inside ring. Of course, the district is democratic, and will always be democratic as long as the republican party contents itself with ring rule. I have been nominated by petition, having 700 names of republicans who desire to vote for me for Congress. The laws of the state of Virginia call for a primary, and the convention which nominated Crupper is not at all in accordance with the procedure laid down by the statutes."

"I want you to know Leftenant Bruce," said my friend.

I thereupon stopped writing and arose to shake hands with a little Englishman in dark clothes.

"What—another one."

"And he's just over here to recuperate—shot in the foot at Mons; in the arm at Ypres; in the nose at Somme."

And then we all went to a place where we could all sit down together, and my talkative friend began to relate so many experiences of his own that Leftenant Bruce of the Ancient and Honorable Musketeers of the Shire of Berks didn't have a chance to do nonthing excent consume large quantity.

And with that enlightening information he relapsed into his semi-unconscious state of mental story telling, relating to himself all these interesting things until we struck a stone in the road about a mile further, which joited Bruce enough to allow him to continue for just a second:

"He was just letting the aeroplane glide into the German camp when he heard the most horrible noise in the world—"And we were off until the other end of the bridge, where the Chevy Chase! cars swing round. We bumped again, and Leftenant Bruce, taking that cigar from his mouth, continued:

with considerable ability and unction. Later in the evening, however, my talkative friend left, and as Leftenant Bruce had to go home—he was staying in Chevy Chase—I suggested a ride.

He was willing, and we got into a taxicab.

And then it was that I discovered the remarkable fact that Leftenant Bruce was the one and only mental story teller on earth.

This is what I mean:
He took from his inside pocket a cigar case. From the case he pulled two enormous cigars. Each seemed to be a foot long. He gave me one and stuck the other with a snap between his teeth, lighted it and settled back. The taxicab started and just at that moment Leftenant Bruce said:
"Remarkable story about a young moment Leftenant Bruce said:

"Remarkable story about a young chap in my company. One of the most extraordinary cases of double personality you ever saw. Fact is, they don't know whether to give him a V. C. or sack him. Most extraordinary. It was like this—"

And with that he stuck his cigar back in his mouth and began smoking it. At 14th and F streets the taxi crossed some car tracks, joited the leftenant and he took the cigar from his

"So when we left England," he said, "this young fellow had a deuce of a time to get his folks' permission—" And then back went the cigar and Leftenant Bruce continued his silence

Leftenant Bruce continued his silence again.

At 14th street and New York avenue the taxi joited across some more tracks, disturbed the trend of the mental story teller's mind; out came the long cigar, and with it these words:

"He licked that big Highlander out of his boots, and just because Lord Kitchener—"

More silence.

The taxicab spun along 14th to K and turned west, meaning more tracks, and another jolt, which spilled a few more words of the silent tale:

"Just about that time," said Leften—"

Dat's de time when he mestly gets home.

That was thrust upon him, how-ever, with its consequent distortion of the alphabet after his name, and expressed herself thus:

"That suttingly am nice for Mistah George. Dey let's him put A. M. after his name; and dat's suttinly de right thing, 'kase dat's the time when he mostly gets home from dese yer din-year.

He knows he can't get any more food until the ice has melted in the spring and he means to have enough. I don't believe he would work the way he is doing if he wasn't pretty sure that it is necessary."

"Now, really, even if you hate to admit it, that's a most remarkable story,

Johnny Chuck sat up the better to look at Sammy Jay and make sure that Sammy meant what he was saying. "What more have you seen or heard?" he demanded eagerly, all the time chewing a clover leaf.

"Nothing much," replied Sammy, "only I overheard Euster Bear say that his new fur coat is the thickest he ever has had and he wished cold weather would hurry up and come because he's uncomfortable now. He's "To eat or not to eat, that is the question," said Johnny Chuck, as he ninbled daintily at a clover leaf.

"You don't look to me as if there was any question at all," declared Sammy Jay, who happened along just in time to overhear what Johnny had said. "How any one as fat as you are can even look at food is something I can't understand. If you eat much

"I'm not thinking of my stomach," retorted Johnny Chuck, indignantly. "I wouldn't eat another mouthful if I could be sure that I'm fat enough."

"Fat enough!" exclaimed 'sammy Jay. "Ho, ho, ho! If you get much fatter you won't be able to walk How fat do you want to get?"

"Fat enough to be sure of sleeping comfortably all winter and having strength enough left to take care of white complete the same that they will have need of them. I think that the winter is going to be hard and long. I'm almost tempted to move south myself."

"Thank you, Sammy Jay." replied Sammy Jay. "Thank you want to get given these fellows such thick coats it is because she knows that they will have need of them. I think that the winter is going to be hard and long. I'm almost tempted to move south myself."

"Thank you, Sammy Jay." replied Sammy Jay. "Thank you have removed the last doubt from my mind. I don't think I'll turn in to sleep for the winter for a few days yet. A little more fat won't do any harm. There is nothing like being prepared. Too much fat won't hurt me, but too little may."

With this Johnny Chuck fell to eating as if he were half starved instead of nearly bursting with fat.

"It's got everything to do with it," retorted Johnny Chuck. Then he explained that getting fat was his way of storing up food and that it was very necessary that he should have enough to last him until the coming of Mistress Spring. Sammy Jay listened with something very like real interest. He began to understand why it was that Johnny Chuck was so anxious to know what the winter would be.

"Jerry Muskrat thinks it is going to be a long, hard winter," said Sammy as Johnny Chuck stopped speaking.

Johnny pricked up his short, round ears. "How do you know that?" he demanded.
